Title: Professionalism in a Medical Transcriptionist

What is Professionalism? What qualities distinguish a professional from a non Professional?

Professionals may be judged by their attitudes and conduct as they relate to matters of work, interpersonal relationships, and ethics.

Medical Transcriptionists work independently and produce a product, (the transcribed medical documents) which reflects their care, integrity and skill.

1. Professional Medical Transcriptionists function with minimal supervision while producing maximum results in both quantity and quality. While the majority of working transcriptionists do have an immediate supervisor responsible for quality control, the attitude of each transcriptionist should be one of independence and responsibility for his or her own work. Professionals take pride in the accuracy and completeness of their own work and gain satisfaction from a job well done both in quality and quantity.
2. Professional Medical Transcriptionists demonstrate responsibility in their day to day working judgements by combining past experience, the powers of deductive thinking, and the vast store of medical knowledge to produce an accurate medical record. Taking the time to consult references or other health care professionals is the distinguishing feature between the professional and others who cannot be bothered to be medically accurate as they carelessly and thoughtlessly transcribed.
3. Professional Medical Transcriptionists demonstrate ethic of values when dealing with confidential or personal information contained in the medical record. The Professional resists gossiping about personal information contained in medical records and protects the right to privacy confidentiality for each patient.
4. Professional Medical Transcriptionists demonstrate a disciplined work attitude with dedication to the needs of the patient before personal needs.

5. Professional Medical Transcriptionists display a commitment to continue in education by setting a high standard of performance and knowledge. The Professional welcomes new knowledge and readily participates in educational efforts not only for personal enrichment but also for the collective benefit of the entire Health-Care team.
6. Professional Medical Transcriptionists view co workers as valuable members of the Health-Care team treating them with dignity and courtesy.

Through their conduct and attitude, Professional Medical Transcriptionists can demonstrate to the public and other medical professionals that they are indeed disciplined, knowledgeable and dedicated members of the healthcare team
